DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 9-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yamamoto (U.S. 5,811,958) in view of Kinoshita (U.S. 6,157,165).

Regarding claims 9 - 18, Yamamoto discloses wherein a method for charging a battery from a direct-current source liable to significant fluctuations, comprising the repetitive steps of:

converting the DC voltage from said direct-current source into a DC voltage which is higher than the voltage of said battery (figure1 item 4), applying said higher DC voltage to the terminals of a storage capacitor, so as to transfer energy into said storage capacitor (column 5 lines 52 – column 6 lines 6), detecting a predetermined voltage threshold over the terminals of said storage capacitor (figure 5, items b-d disclose a voltmeter). Yamamoto discloses monitoring the voltage, but does not disclose detecting a predetermined voltage threshold. Kinoshita discloses in column 14 lines 42 - 61 wherein a voltage threshold is determined, and upon detection of said voltage threshold, connecting said storage capacitor to said battery during a predetermined time, so as to discharging transfer energy from said storage capacitor into said battery.

Kinoshita discloses wherein the voltage discharge is monitored from battery to charge the capacitor. It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art to modify the Yamamoto system with the Kinoshita system so that the capacitor is not damaged with overdischarging or overcharging.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed 6/01/09 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Regarding claim 9, the applicants argue that the Kinoshita system does not disclose a specific method or system for charging batteries. Kinoshita discloses in column 3 lines 24 - 25 wherein a battery is a direct current source. The batteries charge the capacitors as disclosed in column 3 line 65 – column 4 line 4. The applicant argues that the Yamamoto reference does not disclose “detecting a predetermined voltage threshold over the terminals of said storage capacitor” nor the step of “upon detection of said voltage threshold, connecting said storage capacitor to said battery during a predetermined time, so as to transfer energy from said storage capacitor into battery.”

Conclusion

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
